Have you ever wondered if you can live normally in a vehicle? Most people believe that it's impossible, but the truth is completely different. Moreover, hundreds of people live like this, and they feel great about it. According to them, it is a perfect place to start a new chapter in life. Can you imagine their everyday life, struggles, and adventures?

Residing in a house on four wheels gives you so many opportunities to make your biggest dreams come true. What's the best, you can make a decision to change your entire life overnight. All you have to do is decide to buy or rent a bus, van, or even car. The kind of conveyance you choose may depend on your current budget. Because the space in a vehicle is smaller than in the usual average house, you will also have lower bills, and more money to save or spend on your aspirations and plans! On top of that, living in a house on four wheels can be an excellent, invaluable investment in your future.

I must also mention the reasons for living in the means of transport. Firstly, in present times, a lot of young people desire to expand their businesses. Unluckily, not everyone has a chance to be born into a wealthy family. To begin with, the idea of renting or buying school buses disseminate among American young adults, who aspired to be independent and self-governing. They have begun to set up their small companies, which usually also take place in their houses. They have worked like a dog, and their small successes made them be on cloud nine. Secondly, a lot of vehicle owners, inspired by adventurous movies, have decided to start a new lifestyle and have gone on an amazing and unusual journey. They travel all over the world and visit charming places that they accidentally see on their way. Every minute and every second of van dweller's lifetime creates a delightful memory.

However, there are less known and inferior sides of dwelling in means of transport. The most common and major disadvantages of owning a house on four wheels are the need for maintenance of the machine, and disturbing and disgusting bugs, which often have their habitats there. Fortunately, there are many ways to get rid of them. Another drawback is that traveling may become overwhelming and tiring. Unluckily, your resources must be regularly refilled. One of the most troublesome problems is taking a shower, as many modes of transport do not have a shower. You also have to be aware that living in that tiny houses is associated with parking in ominous and gravely dangerous areas. Nevertheless, walking up with a new view every morning makes it all worth it.

In conclusion, dwelling in a house on four wheels is worthwhile! This kind of lifestyle gives plenty of possibilities to make your dreams come true, meet new friends, and experience new things. It additionally teaches you, how real life looks like. Would you decide to move to the vehicle? As Pliny the Elder said: „Home is where the heart is”!
